Perceptions and Integration of AI into School-Based Occupational Therapy (1.5 PDUs)

May 13, 2025 | 6:00pm – 7:30pm | Virtual

Presenters: Jayson Davies, MA, OTR/L, and Teresa Fair-Field, OTD, OTR/L

In this session, participants will explore how Artificial Intelligence (AI) tools can support school-based occupational therapy (OT) assessments, interventions, and documentation processes. By utilizing AI to minimize paperwork hours, we can maximize time spent with students. This session will cover current and emerging research, including insights into school-based occupational therapy practitioners' perceptions of AI use in their field and what it will take to support OT practitioners' use of AI in OT settings. We will also discuss ethical considerations and practical applications for AI in school-based occupational therapy.

Learning Objectives:

- Identify at least three applications of Artificial Intelligence (AI) in school-based occupational therapy assessments, interventions, and documentation.
- Understand the findings of research on school-based occupational therapy practitioners' perceptions of AI use, exploring how these insights can inform effective implementation.

ABOUT OUR PRESENTERS

Jayson Davies, MA, OTR/L, is the host of the OT Schoolhouse Podcast and has been a school-based occupational therapy practitioner since 2012. With experience as both a contracted therapist and an "in-house" employee for two distinctly different districts, Davies has had the opportunity to appreciate the differences between both small-rural and large-suburban districts. In 2017, he founded the OT Schoolhouse website and now supports school-based occupational therapy practitioners via courses, conferences, and the OTS Collaborative Community. Recently, Davies has put forth his efforts toward supporting practitioners interested in tiered intervention, collaborative programming, and managing their workloads. He was honored in 2023 with the OTAC Susan J. Harris OT Entrepreneur Award.

Teresa Fair-Field, OTD, OTR/L (WA), clinical assistant professor of occupational therapy at Baylor University since 2021, is affiliated with Early Markers, a Seattle-based computer vision startup whose NIHfunded work in machine learning and infant motor development is building an app-based tool to provide AI-supported early screening together with parent coaching and education.
