How Occupational Therapy Can Offer Meaningful Care at End of Life (1 PDU)

Erika Lim, OTR/L, and an End-of-Life Doula

What is most important to people and their circle of care at the end of life?

This time can often feel fearful, powerless, or at times, out of our control. Yet, there is so much that we, as occupational therapy practitioners, can do to ensure this time is meaningful and that the wishes of our patients are honored right up until the end.

Join us in this important discussion on what it means to honor the autonomy of the dying as a true form of client-centered care at end of life.

ABOUT OUR PRESENTER

Domenique H. Embrey, OTD, OTR/L, is an occupational therapy practitioner with more than 30 years of experience. She has worked in schools, preschools, hospital units, and clinics. Embrey has experience in mental health, developmental and physical disabilities, neuro rehab and wellness. She currently has a private practice and is an OT at the California School for the Deaf Fremont. Embrey has been an academic fieldwork coordinator and is currently an assistant professor at Samuel Merritt University Occupational Therapy Department. She also serves as co-chair of the OTAC Private Practice Network.

Erika Lim, OTR/L, an End of Life Doula, finds the end of life a ripe time for unearthing love, meaning, and peace. She is most fascinated by the rich learnings of the life and death cycles that happen in our everyday life. If we approach death with a bit more curiosity, it reveals truths about how we want to live. Lim hopes to bridge the communication gap between generations of loved ones regarding life and death while still respecting the values instilled by our elders. She completed her master's degree in occupational therapy from the University of Southern California in 2018. In 2020, she became a certified death midwife with the Sacred Crossings Institute and in 2024 she completed INELDA's EOL doula training and joined the INELDA team as an educator. Lim is currently part of the second cohort of the PAUSE Starlight Business Development Residency for end-of-life entrepreneurs and is completing the Ablon/Hilot therapy practitioner program at the Kailukuan School of Indigenous Science. She plans to use this intuitive knowledge and wisdom in supporting those in her community and her work.
